Introduction to Percy Jackson and the Olympians

In the beginning of the universe, there was only Khaos, the first deity and Protogenos of the Void. From her, appeared a total of 8 Protogenoi. The 8 were Gaea (The Earth), Tartarus (The Infernal Pit), Ouranos (The Sky), Pontus (The Seas), Erebus (Mist/Darkness), Nyx (Night), and Akhlys (Misery).

Later in the timeline of Greek myths, Gaea and her youngest child Kronos the Titan, a member of one of her three sets of children, killed Ouranos as revenge for him putting her other children in Tartarus. Kronos then married his sister, Rhea, and gave birth to five immortals. But, he swallowed them all because of a prophecy given by Ouranos that he will die from his children as well. Later, Rhea gives birth to Zeus, who then tricks Kronos into vomiting his siblings back out, thereby starting the First Titanomachy (Titan War) between the Olympians and the Titans.

After their victories against the Titans and Kronos, the Olympians began to have children with mortals around the world, resulting in the creation of demigods. These demigods are those who inherit the powers of their godly parents.

Much later, when Percy Jackson first came to Camp Half-Blood, a safe haven for demigods, the Great Prophecy was set into motion. This prophecy saw Percy, Annabeth Chase, and Luke Castellan, the vessel of a revived Kronos, as its main players. During the Second Titan War, Luke was killed, in turn destroying Kronos' soul further, making him unable to reform ever again. Almost immediately after this, however, came the Prophecy of the Seven, including Percy, Annabeth, Frank Zhang, Leo Valdez, Jason Grace, Piper Mclean, and Hazel Levesque. This prophecy saw these Seven go against a reawakened Gaea and her Giants (offspring made for the sole purpose of defeating Olympians), resulting in the Second Gigantomachy (Giant War) after the first millenia ago.

Prophecy of the Protogenoi

*In the realm where mist and chaos intertwine, Primordials stir, their ancient designs align.
From the depths of eternity, they shall rise,
Giants awakened 'neath darkened skies' guise.*

*Their awakening heralds an age reborn,
Where demigods, monsters, and giants are torn.
Back to the dawn of Titans, they're sent,
To rewrite the tale where chaos is lent.*

*In battles of gods on a primordial stage,
They'll wage a battle of myths and rage.
Demigods, giants, and monsters unite,
To rewrite history, in chaos' might.*

*So heed this warning, children of fate,
As primordials rise, altering time's state.
In the clash of epochs, destinies entwine,
As the primordials' will, shapes the divine.*

The Prophecy of the Protogenoi was a prophecy issued 1 year after the defeat of Gaea and the Giants at the hands of the Seven, issued by both Rachel Elizabeth Dare, the Oracle of Camp Half-Blood, and Ella the Harpy, a harpy acting as an oracle to Camp Jupiter. However, seemingly a coincidence, Percy Jackson has apparently disappeared off the face of the world. Percy Jackson is the most vital asset the demigods could have, and in the face of this terrible darkness, he has vanished.

The Prophecy speaks of two primordial, the primordial of mist and darkness, Erebus and the primordial of the Void and creation, Khaos. With her immeasurable pool of powers, Khaos revived the Giants and monstrous forces of terrible power, spreading chaos through the world. On the other hand, Erebus has used his powers of the mist to make it start fluctuating, giving him the power to send demigods, monsters, and giants to the past, specifically the First Titanomachy.

Topic 1: Reemergence of Khaos (χάος)

Background:

The demigods of both Camp Half-Blood and Camp Jupiter, the demigod haven for Roman demigods, have been living a rarely peaceful life for the past 2 months, but in the emptiest parts of the world, a new threat is looming. However, a few days into the new month, Rachel Elizabeth Dare, the vessel of the Oracle of Delphi, and Ella the Harpy, the harpy who memorized the Sibylline Books, issued a terrifying prophecy, the Prophecy of Protogenoi

The second primordial mentioned in the Prophecy of Protogenoi is Khaos, the most powerful being in the universe, the creator of it. This time, however, the demigods are not alone, as the prophecy states that it is not only demigods who are to fight, but monsters and giants alike. As proven time and time again, before trying to fend off those threatening to destroy the world, our heroes must first learn to overcome their differences and bridge the gaps between them, for it is only together that they stand a chance of victory.

Current Issue:

As the strongest and most omnipotent immortal in the universe, Khaos is a threat much higher than even Gaea and Kronos combined. Unlike the latter two, Khaos is a being that has never resurfaced since the beginning of time, and so there is no documented or heard-of way to even defend against her. With the demigods' greatest asset missing, the demigods of Camp Half-Blood must now try to do everything in their ability to gain knowledge of Khaos, at least enough to protect themselves against her whims.

The reason for Khaos' sudden reemergence, however, is due to her distaste of the world that has been built up over millennia. As an omniscient observer to the entirety of the universe, she has observed every second of the events of the world, but never witnessed the defeat of a protogenoi by demigods. After the defeat of Gaea, the second ever protogenoi, the world had given Khaos a new reason to restart. Soon after the Prophecy of Khaos was issued, the same Giants that were just recently destroyed, began to resurface at an exponentially higher pace, bringing them back into the world. However, with their mother Gaea gone, they have no leader to serve, and for now simply remain natural enemies to the demigods. This must change in order for Khaos to be defeated, as only with the aid of the children of Gaea can the demigods defend themselves.

Possible Solutions:

As you confront the looming threat of Khaos and navigate the delicate balance of power between demigods, monsters, and giants, it is imperative to adopt a multifaceted strategy. Seek more knowledge by forging alliances with ancient beings or the demigods of Camp Jupiter. Both the demigods and Giants are going into this battle unprepared, so even try figuring out ways to exploit Khaos' potential weaknesses. Cultivate ties between you and your archenemies to foster protection and power, mitigating the risk of Khaos irreversibly changing the world. Above all, maintain adaptability, adjusting your tactics in response to the evolving whims of Khaos.

Questions to Consider:

- 1) How can you divide the resources at your disposal to fight against Khaos? How do you expect to fight something with no physical form?
- 2) How can you gather information on a creature that has never been documented in real time?
- 3) How do you expect to defend innocent and meddling mortals from the effects of Khaos?

Topic 2: Reemergence of Erebus (Ερεβος)

In the ancient eras of the world, the Protogenoi, or primordial gods, were the ones who created the universe as we know it today. However, after the Second Giant War, some of those same primordials reawakened, bringing with them countless abnormalities in the realm of myth. Due to this, the Oracle of Delphi, Rachel Elizabeth Dare, and Ella the Harpy, a harpy who has parts of the Sibylline Books memorized, issued the greatest prophecy of them all: the Prophecy of the Protogenoi.

The first primordial mentioned by the Prophecy of the Protogenoi is Erebus, the primordial god of mist and darkness. In a dramatic turn of events, Erebus manipulated the Mist to send countless demigods, monsters, and the spirits of Giants left in Tartarus, to the past of the First Titanomachy. With the demigods forced to navigate a war between the Titans and their own parents, at the same time allying with their sworn enemies, the Titanomachy will occur in a way much more complicated than its original course. Old rivalries may come forth once again and unforeseen connections may arise, potentially changing the lives of demigods and beasts irreversibly. This motley group of mythological beasts and descendants have a network of decisions to make, a web that could possibly alter the very future they came from in more ways than one.

Current Issue:

The god of darkness and shadows, Erebus is one of the first descendants of Khaos. As her son, he was born with no form, instead existing in a state beyond the physical - a ghost-like state. From the very beginning of the universe itself, Erebus spread his darkness until it seeped into every corner of the universe, leaving no stone untouched. As the personification of darkness, he blends into the shadows and is at his strongest at night. Similar to Khaos, Erebus possesses immense power and there are no past instances where the demigods have fought against him. Even though he is a primordial god, he has never been documented as an evil or good being - his awakening has stirred many ancient and evil things, including his children, but his intentions are not yet clear.

Now, everyone - demigods, monsters, gods, and giants alike - have been transported back in time - into the age of the titans. With the gods and titans fighting for survival with the demigods, giants, and monsters thrown into the middle, everyone is at risk of imminent death. While most demigods might want to stop this fight and ensure that the gods prevail again, some may not agree, and the monsters and giants will not be trusted to want the same. Thrown back into a time of treachery and unpredictability, all sides must fight to ensure not only their survival, but of the centuries of people and creatures ahead of them.

Possible Solutions:

When facing such a new and alarming threat, the most important thing to keep in mind is how all beings can function as a unit. Disorder and chaos will only cause more harm and fear to not only non-mortals but the mortals around the world as well. The most important thing in this fight will be information. Nearly nothing is known about the primordial beings other than they take no physical form, preferring to remain as masses of energy which makes them even more dangerous. Whoever knows the most about the intentions of these beings and how they came to be can also figure out their weaknesses and how to prevail. But don't only look out for yourself - forge alliances with unlikely people and creatures. Only by forming unconventional collaborations and new alliances, can you stand a chance to protect the world from the unknown threats that have risen once more into the universe.

Questions to Consider:

1. How can you use your knowledge from the future on how to win again?
2. What will you do about those who do not wish to see the gods win?
3. What tactics will you use to work with each other for either side?
4. How will you get back to the future, regardless of the outcome?
